

EnviroLube – A Slick Oil Change

When I first heard the name EnviroLube, I imagined a company that would be in the business of cleaning up oil spills. Well, in fact, EnviroLube has cleaned up the way vehicle oil changes are done and accidental spills are no longer a problem.

EnviroLube is a service bay system that has eliminated the chance of vehicle fluids leaching through the service pit and contaminating the soil. Traditional below ground service bays are made from poured concrete, which, by their nature, are porous and can develop harmful cracks over time.

EnviroLube has gone one step further by designing a seamless fiberglass containment structure, which is virtually impenetrable and any spills that do happen are easily cleaned up. That's good. It gets even better.

This system also has specially-designed lighting and bright, white reflective surfaces that allow the service technicians to better see what they are doing while performing inspections and work. Then they added the latest in oil service technology, which is organized to make the process as simple and quick as possible. The key word here is quick. Who likes to spend time waiting for an oil change? Not me. EnviroLube offers the quickest oil change in the business.

So, where can you get an EnviroLube oil change?

So far, for those in the Greater Metropolitan Toronto area, and especially the Durham region, the only location is at the newly built Nurse Chevrolet Cadillac, at Dundas and Thickson in Whitby. And what a spectacular place it is!

Mary Nurse, the daughter of founder, Bill Nurse, made certain that her facility would be second to none. Her vision, by including the EnviroLube system to the service operations, has assured that the customer comes first and only the best will do for Mary's spoiled customers. Think you just get an oil change there? Think again. What you get is kid glove pampering.

Hand over your keys, grab a coffee and the paper, and relax in a comfy lounge while the experts get busy. For you ladies, this is almost better than going to the beauty salon, and from what I hear, much less expensive.

The process starts with the carpet treatment, colour doesn't matter. The mats are removed from your vehicle and put through a special automatic carpet-cleaning machine. While that's happening, other technicians vacuum the floors, test the brakes and check the wheel alignment. A computer printout is provided to you for the technical information. Then it's on to the EnviroLube area. There they change your oil and filter and top up other vital fluids. All done? No siree.

Your vehicle is moved to a third bay where it's washed and dried. All you have to do now is pay the bill and drive away. The average cost is $49.95. A bargain.

So how long does it take to do all of these things? 29 minutes, that's all, less than half an hour. For any do-it-yourself, shade tree mechanic types reading this, try to imagine how long it would take you to do all this, at home in your driveway on a Saturday morning, not to mention the chances of ground contamination.

Now try to imagine doing it in the winter or think of what else you could be doing with all the time you've saved by letting Nurse Chevrolet Cadillac, and the EnviroLube system, baby your baby. What's even better, all vehicle makes and models are welcome. Visiting the showroom while waiting is a tempting bonus.

The brilliant integration of EnviroLube's environmentally conscious and efficient oil changing system, combined with a spa-like treatment for your vehicle at Nurse Chevrolet Cadillac, is the first of it's kind in Canada. It won't be the last.

This country isn't prone to revolutionary actions, but this one is most welcome.
